Building Relationships in School Age Programs Series with the ECCDC Training Team

Building relationships and connections in school age programs matters. Relationships underpin the work of educators, and both Ontario's early years and middle years frameworks emphasize the importance of relationships, with research highlighting the beneficial impact that positive relationships have on children through their childhood and into adulthood. This 3-part series will explore how educators working in school age programs can develop supportive, trusting relationships with children and their families, and intentionally build strong, supportive relationships with the multiple partners they engage with.

Series Objectives

- Participants will identify how building and maintaining positive relationships within school age programs reflects Ontario's early learning and middle years frameworks.
- Participants will select and implement age appropriate and culturally responsive strategies to integrate within their school age programs, to create welcoming environments that support positive relationship building.
- Participants will uncover the unique challenges of developing relationships within school age programs and strategize how to overcome them.

Session 1: Supporting Relationships With and Between Children

The first session in this series will explore how How Does Learning Happen? Ontario's Pedagogy for the Early Years, Think Feel Act for the Middle Years, Gearing Up: A Strategic Framework to help Ontario Middle Years Children Thrive, and On My Way frames relationships. The session will then go on to explore a variety of age-appropriate strategies that educators can utilize to support them in fostering warm, caring relationships with children attending out of school programs. The session will then look at how educators can facilitate experiences and environments that enable children to develop positive peer-to-peer relationships.

Session 2: Developing Relationships With Schools and Community Partners

The second session in this series will investigate a variety of approaches that school age programs can adopt to plan intentional connections with school administrators and staff, both formally and informally, to build mutually respectful, strong, trusting relationships that support children and families to feel a sense of continuity between school, program, and home. The session will then go on to consider how educators can build relationships with community organizations and individuals to connect their program and children with their local community.

Session 3: Facilitating Relationships With Families and Connection Between Families and Partner Organizations

During the third and final session in this series, educators will have an opportunity to consider the importance of developing supportive, reciprocal relationships with the families of children attending school age programs that are built on trust. The session will then dive into ways that school age educators can connect with the families by adopting authentic family engagement strategies and family-centred practices. Thought will be given to how educators can meet families where they are at in a culturally responsive way. Lastly, educators will contemplate ways in which they can facilitate the three-way sharing of information between families, school, and their afterschool program.

Schema Play: Noticing and Building Upon Children’s Innate Desires Two Part Series with Victoria Armstrong

“Schemas are a fancy word for the urges that children have to do things like climb, throw things and hide in small places... They are the building blocks for the brain, repeated behaviour that in turn forge connections in the brain, patterns of unfolding, learning and growth... By knowing about schemas, we can recognize and support their urges and development,” (Caro, 2012).

Part 1

In this 1.5-hour session, come and learn more about schema theory, the role of observation and documentation in schema play, the nine most common early childhood schemas including orientation, positioning, connection, trajectory, enclosure, transporting, enveloping, rotation and transformation, as well as material and space considerations to support each schema. We will also take time to explore the transformation schema together.

Part 2

In this 1.5-hour session, come and participate in a facilitated conversation that will invite you to reflect more deeply on your observations of schema play in your program since participating in Part 1. As part of our conversation, a story will be shared through documentation about how schema play evolved from infant age to toddler to preschooler as a way of supporting deeper and sustained observations around schema play in young children.

Victoria Armstrong, RECE, B.ECS, Owner Side By Side (SBS) Consulting Services

For over 15 years, Victoria Armstrong has devoted her life to living out this view of children and supporting and challenging others to live out this view of children also. A published author and dance instructor, she has held a variety of roles throughout her early learning career; Classroom Educator, Pedagogical Leader, College Professor, HR and Communications Specialist, Coordinator and Early Learning Consultant. A large part of her career was dedicated to the pioneering and growth of a children's art initiative that integrated local artists into early learning and licensed child care programs. Her passion for the arts in early childhood along with giving visibility to children's thinking through the process of pedagogical documentation is what has given her career specific direction over the past 8 years.

Igniting Curiosity: Implementing Inquiry-Based Learning in Early Childhood Education Series with the ECCDC Training Team

Join us for an engaging and informative series designed to inspire curiosity and foster a love of learning in young children. "Igniting Curiosity" will explore the concept of inquiry-based learning, delve into various types of inquiry, and demonstrate practical strategies for implementing these approaches in your program. Learn how to set up provocations and invitations to play and understand the differences between these concepts. Don't miss this opportunity to equip yourself with the tools and techniques to create an inquiry-friendly environment that nurtures young minds. Register today and take the first step towards making learning an exciting adventure for children!

Series Objectives

- Participants will identify and differentiate between structured, guided, and open-ended inquiries, understanding the unique characteristics and benefits of each type.
- Participants will understand how to effectively set up provocations and invitations to play, understanding the differences between these approaches and how they can spark curiosity and exploration in young children.
- Participants will evaluate environments that encourage exploration, experimentation, and reflection, supporting the overall development of children's inquiry skills and nurturing their natural curiosity.

Session 1: Embracing Open-Ended Inquiry

In the first session of our three-part series on inquiry-based learning, we will explore the exciting and dynamic realm of open-ended inquiry. This approach empowers children to formulate their own questions and decide on the processes to find the answers, promoting a high level of autonomy and personalized learning. This session will provide you with the tools to facilitate open-ended inquiries that transform your program into a hub of exploration and discovery. Join us and take the first step in transforming your program with inquiry-based learning!

Session 2: Delving into Guided Inquiry

The second session of our series focuses on guided inquiry, where the educator presents a question, but children are given the freedom to determine the process for discovering the answer. This approach balances structure with children's autonomy, fostering deeper engagement and independent thinking. Through interactive activities and real-world examples, you'll gain insights into creating meaningful, child-led explorations that stimulate curiosity and creativity. Join us to learn how to seamlessly integrate guided inquiry into your practice!

Session 3: Exploring Structured Inquiry

In the final session of our series, we dive into the world of structured inquiry. This session will provide you with a comprehensive understanding of how to design and facilitate structured inquiry activities, where the educator provides both the question and the process for finding the answer. Don't miss this foundational session to complete your journey into inquiry-based learning!

Extraordinary Environments – Considering Wall Display Opportunities with Debbi Sluys

An interactive, reflective workshop which invites educators to think about their practice of displaying on their walls. The workshop framework covers the following four areas: 1. Align the environment to values; 2. Walls that silence; 3. Intentional display; and 4. The Joy of Aesthetics. Educators and Supervisors will learn about how their view of the child is reflected to themselves, the families, and the children in the choices they make for the displays in the playroom. They will see the connection to their environment and How Does Learning Happen? They will feel inspired by the examples and challenged to re-examine their own playroom choices to offer respectful, educational, and fresh displays which reflect the children and the learning which is occurring. They will uncover the early years “four letter” word which should not be used to describe playroom displays. Participants will be offered such language as “prime-real estate” and “billboard” when considering their choice for displays. It will re-ignite their passion for early years and re-align their purpose for their extraordinary work!

Exploring Open-Ended Art Experiences Studio Tour: A Field Trip

The Children's Art/Play Studio offers programs for children ages 2.5 to 5 years old in their creative studio. Through these programs, children have the opportunity to move freely around and explore various art forms through open-ended play. During this tour, participants will have the opportunity to engage in the large array of art mediums used in the studio, discuss the possibilities for their own early learning environment, and consider next steps in the art and play experiences they provide for children. Please dress for mess!

Maria and Chris Wowk met in High School in Toronto, Ontario, at Humber College. They became a couple when Chris was at York University and Maria was at The Ontario College of Art, (now OCAD University). Shortly after, they married and had 2 beautiful boys, now adult men. Maria graduated from OCAD with a Scholarship in 1989. She worked in her mother's Nursery School with 2 and a half to four-year-old children. The High Park Nursery School was eventually passed on to Maria when her mother, Patricia Canham, retired. The school evolved into a children's art school called The Artful Child that operated in the Junction in Toronto and then in Rosedale. The Artful Child is now run by Jessica Borowets and has a new, second location in Rosedale. Chris graduated from York University in 1990 with a BA in psychology. He has many years experience working with children in schools, as well as coming from a large extended family of nieces, nephews and cousins. Chris also completed Teacher's Effectiveness Training at Humber College in Toronto.

Designing YES Spaces: Embrace the YES and Design a Space for Children with Carla Ward

Design an innovative early learning space that will allow children to discover who they are rather than telling them who they are. Environments that encourage educators to be able to say “yes” to children address children’s agency, risky play, knowing their limits, leadership and workplace culture, teaching children to respect boundaries, feeling control over their life, giving children the autonomy to know and feel who they are, and so much more.

Early Learning Art Explorations, a Three-Part Series: Creating an Outdoor Art Studio, Reflections on the Value and Possibilities of Recycled Materials in Children's Play and Process vs. Product? Examining Our Ideas About Young Children and the Arts with Victoria Armstrong

Session One: Process? Product? Examining Our Ideas About Young Children and the Arts

What is art? Why do we engage in artistic experiences with young children? What are children pursuing in their relationships with art materials? What values and beliefs do we hold about young children and the arts and do our practices align with these? What if there's more to the arts with young children than process and product? Do common mantras like 'process-based art' speak to the complexity that is inherent in children's pursuits with art materials? Together, in this 1.5-hour session, let's deconstruct 'process' and 'product' in children's art experiences and consider what other possibilities might exist for children if we shifted some of our language, thinking and practices.

Session Two: Creating an Outdoor Studio

Come and discover the value and possibilities in creating an outdoor art studio. We will consider questions such as: What could an outdoor studio look like? Feel like? Would it be a permanent or transient space? Or have elements of both permanency and fluidity? Would there be a difference in the materials that are offered outdoors vs indoors? What possibilities does an outdoor studio hold that an indoor studio doesn't? How could space be used? What elements could tie the indoor and outdoor studios together? Material, space and outdoor provocation ideas will be shared as part of the conversation, and we will also take time to explore 1-2 art and nature provocations together.

Session Three: Reflections on the Value and Possibilities of Recycled Materials in Children's Play

Bottle caps are buttons on a space shuttle, an empty wrapping paper tube is a telescope, leftover laminate is the windshield on a cardboard car. Recycled materials hold infinite possibilities. Children naturally see these possibilities and breathe new life into materials that we as adults might otherwise discard. In this 1.5-hour session, we'll think together about the important role recycled materials hold in children's play and how we can nurture and deepen this natural relationship between children and recycled materials. We will also take some time ourselves to explore the possibilities of a few recycled materials.

Join us for this interactive session as we explore the world of mark making in the early years! We will share inspiring ideas of materials that you can add to your environments to spark curiosity and wonder in learners of all ages. Together we will reflect on the stages of emergent writing and begin to notice the trails of learning that are sprinkled around our learning spaces. Through this hands-on exploration using a variety of materials, educators will reflect and gather ideas on how to weave mark making experiences within their indoor and outdoor spaces. Come join us for an evening filled with opportunities to explore, play and leave your mark!

Session Three: Discover Literacy While Exploring Outdoors

Would you love to explore literacy outdoors, but are not sure where to start? Connecting literacy to the outdoors is a wonderful way to inspire children to use their imagination and engage in learning using the elements of nature that are right at our fingertips! Grab your rain boots and hats to join us for this outdoor session as we experience group games, storytelling, and invitations using natural materials and loose parts to develop early literacy skills. We will share practical tips and interactive experiences that will give you ideas for starting up an outdoor routine in any season and weather, from green spaces to concrete jungles. We will begin indoors at the ECCDC, then move as a group to the Glenridge Quarry site.

Stimulating Language and Literacy Development in an Inquiry, Play-based Environment with Carolyn Hadcock

Emotional Regulation for Early Years with Dana Sproule

This workshop helps Early Childhood Educators put emotional regulation front and center in their classrooms. Participants will learn a child-centered, trauma-informed framework for understanding and interpreting emotional outbursts. Using that framework, they will learn classroom strategies to use when children are in the green, yellow, and red zones of emotional regulation. Teachers particularly appreciate tools to “trick” the brain back online during an outburst, and strategies to include emotional regulation tools in the daily curriculum so children grow in their capacity to manage emotions. This workshop is best suited for educators but could easily be adapted for parents.

Dana Sproule, Burning Point Coaching and Consulting

Dana became fascinated with the dynamics of leadership when she was a young adult, working at summer camp. She loved seeing the difference she could make for her team and her campers, by leading from a place of service and clear purpose. For 12 years, Dana worked with a non-profit, coaching university students as they stepped into leadership for the first time. She trained front line staff, managers, and regional leaders, equipping them for mentoring, strategic planning, conflict resolution, and working in multi-ethnic contexts. Prior to starting her coaching practice, Dana worked in pastoral ministry and in child protection. This breadth of experience has given her empathy for the challenges people face, and conviction that everyone is worthy of respect and love. She is a gifted speaker, group facilitator, and trainer.

Getting Back to the Roots of Play with Pierre Harrison, B.Sc., M.Sc. and B.Ed.

Research around children's development tells us that play is essential to a child's physical health and emotional well-being. Play stimulates all aspects of a child's development, i.e. the physical, social, cognitive, emotional, and spiritual aspects. Through play children, armed with curiosity and a spirit of inquiry, explore their environment and build knowledge about the world around them. In doing so they prepare the foundation on which they will build a life of resilience, creativity, self-confidence and life-long learning. Play is also essential for the continued growth of adults.

That's why PLAYLearnThink workshops incorporate playful ways of engaging participants. Whether working as a group on a challenging task or experimenting with various materials, the focus is always the use of play to nurture imagination and foster creativity which leads to great feats of problem solving and a heightened self-esteem.

1. Overview of the importance of play in the healthy development of children - This section is an engaging presentation on play and learning through play. It includes what we know from research and practice. It touches upon different topics such as the benefits of self-directed play, exploring risk, nature play, resilience and the adult's role in supporting play. I also share videos and stories from personal experiences and touch upon what is happening in various parts of the world.
2. Loose parts play - Participants will play and create with a multitude of materials (loose parts) and tools. They will plunge into the joy of self-directed, spontaneous play and thus feel firsthand what children experience during free play.
3. Debrief

Pierre Harrison grew up in Northern Ontario. He enjoyed a playful childhood filled with bumps and scrapes, wonder and adventure, and eventually earned a B.Sc. in Biochemistry, a M.Sc. in Protein Chemistry and a B.Ed. with qualifications to teach at the Junior, Intermediate, and Senior levels in Ontario. Pierre facilitates play training workshops across Canada and in Europe. He is also invited to keynote on play, inquiry and learning at national and international conferences. To date 15,290 teachers, educators, recreation leaders, health care service providers, parents/caregivers and members of the general public have taken Pierre's Play Ambassadors Oath. Pierre also organizes and facilitates Adventure PlayDays in schools and in community spaces across Canada. To date, 15,045 children have enjoyed his PlayDays.

From Crying to Smiling: Understanding Children's Behaviours with Tina Geers

Ever wonder why some children react in ways we don't understand? The screaming, biting, and hitting came from nowhere! When a seemingly small situation throws them right into a major meltdown. Feeling like you're at a standstill of what to do next? Well, then this webinar is for you! Join us as we discuss the why's behind children's difficult and challenging behaviours and how we can support them during these difficult moments. Learn what happens in a child's brain when they are dysregulated and take away some tools that can help you bring them to a responsive state of mind. It's not easy sometimes...but you are the one who can make a difference. You can help them move from reacting to responding by making meaningful connections and adding some great activities and strategies that everyone can use!

Trauma-informed Emotional Regulation & Well-Being in Early Learning Settings Series: How to Help Children Feel Safe and Seen with Lisa Pinhorn

Session One: Holistic Emotional Regulation Workshop

Emotional Regulation is a hot topic! Come and learn relational skills that will set the stage for more emotional regulation in early learning settings. Leave with hands-on tools & strategies that you can use immediately. Emotional Regulation is a skill that is modelled and practiced by caregivers. This is a skill like all others, they take time and practice to develop. Early Childhood Educators play a vital role in supporting the foundations of mental health in young children. Each day early learning professionals have opportunities to model and help shape children's emotional regulation skills. Early learning settings that offer emotionally safe spaces and foster emotional awareness teach our children necessary lifelong skills.

Topics such as: emotional safety, co-regulation, neuro-affirming practices, developmental trauma, attachment styles, inclusive settings, equity, and staff resiliency are vital for the mental health of our entire ECE community, including children, teachers, and administration. Early learning settings have the potential to be the buffers necessary for the toxic stress levels we are seeing in modern families and harnessing that potential could be life-changing for families.

Session Two: Adverse Early Childhood Experiences (ACEs) and Attachment Styles in Young Children Workshop

During this workshop we teach caregivers and educators the science of stress on trauma in children and families. We highlight how the ACEs research can guide and support why we need to create connected, compassionate, and calm relationships with children. We will also look at Trauma-Informed Care (TIC) and why it is vital we see its value in this generation of children. See the magic that comes from attuned and empathic relationships, and how we can help children of all ages manage the day-to-day stresses of their lives – especially those with trauma, neurodiversity, and complex attachment styles. We walk participants through the theories of co-regulation of emotion, nervous system regulation, and attachment science. Feeling connection is our most powerful tool, especially if there is developmental trauma or toxic stress in the lives of children. Attunement is a magical place of deep connection that is cultivated when we slow down, get curious, and consciously attune to children. Attunement is a special micro-space that has a frequency - when you feel it, you know it. These connected and compassionate spaces are vital for all children to thrive and shine, but even more so if there has been developmental trauma, attachment issues and neurodiversity. This workshop session is based on the interpersonal neurobiology approach taught to us by Dr. Dan Siegal, which helps us use our personal calm neurology to support attachment, co-regulation and emotional safety. In these emotionally rich spaces children can thrive because they feel grounded, connected and seen.

Session Three: Emotional Safety and Cultivating Emotionally Rich Spaces in Early Learning Settings

In this workshop we will show how and why educators need to create connected, compassionate, and calm relationships with children. Come learn why we must also focus on respectful and empathic relationships to help children manage the day-to-day stresses of their lives. We will discuss the best practices and trends that are changing the way we need to address emotional awareness in the lives of this generation of children. When spaces are truly emotionally safe – everything can change for the better. Lisa Pinhorn will walk your educational staff through the theory of Emotional Regulation and how it can expand our understanding of what it means to feel safe within learning settings. Emotional safety is vital to the mental health of our entire educational community, including children, teachers, and administration. Our schools have the potential to be the buffers necessary for the toxic stress levels we are seeing in modern families.

In the Heat of the Moment: Understanding Escalating Behaviours in Early Childhood with Acclaimed Author Barbara Kaiser

We've all been there: a child is beginning to melt down or heat up! What do you do next? In the heat of the moment, has your response ever escalated a child's challenging behaviour? Children's behaviour can escalate quickly. Your feelings about that escalation can erupt just as quickly. De-escalation – helping children calm down – takes time and only happens intentionally. This webinar explores the stages of escalation and ways you can respond that will support and help children to be able to return safely to the group.

The Giving Tree: A Retelling of a Traditional Métis Story with The Métis Nation of Ontario (MNO)

Written and illustrated by Leah Dorian, this vibrantly illustrated children's book beautifully captures the retelling of a traditional Métis story. The Giving Tree is a monologue of Moushoom as he recalls his childhood memories of finding the 'great giving tree' with his mother and father. This story emphasizes core Métis values and beliefs which include; strength, kindness, courage, tolerance, love, honesty, sharing, caring balance, patience, and most importantly, a connection with the Creator and Mother Earth. The ELCC Resource includes: a carrying bag, a copy of The Giving Tree story book, an educator guide, a felt story background, felt story pieces, a matching card game, and language cards.

Increasing Children’s Awareness and Understanding of National Day for Truth and Reconciliation: A Community Collaborative Open House with Métis Nation of Ontario, Fort Erie Friendship Centre and Niagara Regional Native Centre

Early Childhood Educators and Administrators are invited to drop into the ECCDC to learn about the significance of Orange Shirt Day, increasing understanding and awareness of the National Day for Truth and Reconciliation, and to browse resources and tools to increase children’s awareness of Orange Shirt Day and learn about the valuable services offered through our partnering agencies.

National Day for Truth and Reconciliation and Orange Shirt Day takes place on September 30th and opens the door to meaningful conversations about residential schools and the intergenerational impacts they have left behind. It also offers us a chance to think more deeply about truth and reconciliation and how we can listen to and support survivors and their families moving forward. Here in Niagara, we have several agencies who can support us in growing our knowledge and sharing the importance of National Day for Truth and Reconciliation with children and families. We are grateful to partner with the Métis Nation of Ontario, Niagara Regional Native Centre, and Fort Erie Native Friendship Centre for this special open house event.

Anti-Bias in the Early Learning and Child Care Sector with Lisa Pinhorn

Diversity, Equity, and Inclusion (DEI) are important topics for us all to understand. We are all surrounded by bias, it is deeply entrenched into our culture, families, and workplaces. Often our unconscious bias is the deep-seated attitudes people hold subconsciously about those around them. The good news is that when we highlight these issues workplace culture can change, and we remove barriers to inclusion while increasing equity. Barriers to accessibility are very real and are experienced every day in neurodiverse family culture. Unfortunately, many of these barriers are baked into the systems families navigate each day. All of these stressors land directly in early learning settings, where parents often turn for assistance. Accessibility in childcare settings means that we firmly believe in the value of flexibility and are always ready to accommodate the needs and preferences of the children we care for each day. Openness and flexibility are our guiding lights to be truly accessible and inclusive. When you offer an accessible service, you are in barrier removal mode every day, seeking creative solutions that “empower the greatest number of people to participate in the activities in the most effective ways possible.” In this workshop we talk about issues connected to systemic bias, unconscious bias, racism, accessibility, equity, barriers to true inclusion, privilege, and ableism in our culture. We will highlight how ableism deeply impacts our neurodiverse community for children of all ages. We will review the international charters of the human rights of children and disabled people. The information covered will help to cultivate learning spaces where everyone feels a sense of belonging - no matter their disability or culture.

The Métis Nation of Ontario (MNO) Early Learning & Child Care (ELCC) Education Kit Presentation

This session aims to build educators' awareness and knowledge of Métis history, culture and way of life by going through the items in the MNO ELCC Education Kit.

The objectives of this presentation are:

- To build educators' awareness and knowledge of Métis history, culture, and way of life.
- Access to Métis-specific Early Learning and Child Care programming.
- Provide opportunities for Métis children to learn off the land and grow within their culture.
- To build on the Educators' confidence to use Métis-specific cultural items from the Educator Kit in their early learning and child care settings daily.
- Children will engage with and foster a deeper understanding of Métis culture.
- To enhance the Educators' knowledge about appropriation versus appreciation.

The MNO ELCC Advisors hope to build educators' capacity and confidence in implementing Métis culture and curriculum into their classrooms.

Exploring Inclusion in Our Early Learning and Child Care Programs Series with ECCDC Training Team

The Exploring Inclusion four-part series will offer opportunities for educators to explore tools and resources through case studies while considering their daily inclusive practices to support children within their early learning and child care programs. Educators are strongly encouraged to attend all four sessions as the series has been created to build upon each session.

Series Objectives

- Consider what inclusion is and how it is woven into our daily practices through self-reflection and self-awareness.
- Discuss and identify what behaviour and development are and link them to inclusive practices that support children and families.
- Revisit and review relationships, self-regulation, development, environments, daily practices, and curriculum, ensuring the use of inclusive language and practices using the Program Inclusion Reflection Tool.

Exploring Inclusion in Our Early Learning and Child Care Programs Series continued

Session 1 — Educator Self-Reflection and Self-Awareness

During the first session educators will have an opportunity to utilize the practice of self-reflection to understand how their actions within the early learning and child care program can impact both their own development and the development of the children in their care. Various interactive and hands-on experiences will be explored to support developing educators' self-awareness of their expectations. Participants will have an opportunity to consider strategies and techniques that support their development and those of the children in their care to move forward in navigating next steps of their learning journey with resiliency and empathy.

Session 2 — Reflecting on Inclusive Practices Utilizing the Program Inclusion Reflection Tool

Following on from session one's self-reflection, participants will consider how to use the Inclusive Program Reflection Tool of what do they see through the eyes of the child and how utilizing an inclusive approach supports children's behaviour and development. An opportunity will be provided to breakdown the tool and reflect upon how they can use it within their own programs moving forward.

Session 3 — Environments as the Third Educator

If we look at the environment as the third educator through the lens of the Program Inclusion Reflection Tool, what do we need to consider regarding our inclusive practices? Take a step back and reflect on your environment. Does it reflect those living in the space? Can children lead their own play? Moving from structured play to unstructured play, empowering children to extend and plan their play, choice of materials, curriculum modifications, adult reminders and incorporating the element of fun.

Session 4 — Breaking Down Our Daily Practices for Inclusivity

As educators navigate a new pathway, the final session will take a deep dive into inclusive early learning strategies, challenging our daily practices and routines, use of language, equitability, power relationships and how it translates to best practices. Moving forward educators will have an opportunity to consider next steps for implementation into both their daily practice and early learning environments and early learning and child care programs.

Strengthening Our Understanding of Indigenous Culture in Early Childhood with Jeannie Martin, Assistant Professor (MPEd, BEd, BA), Brock University Faculty of Education and Stacy Tekonwaniahesen Hill

During this session, participants will explore ways they can strengthen their understanding of Indigenous Culture and how to apply this knowledge within their early learning environments. Through this session, participants will receive helpful resources to continue their learning on Indigenous Culture and ways in which they can apply this knowledge to create culturally safe learning environments for Indigenous learners and educators. Participants will also explore the ways they can support land-based pedagogy for all early learners.

Engaging Families in Authentic Ways

Creating Community in Your Early Learning Environment with Joel Seaman

An early learning community provides equal voice to all involved – teachers, students, families. Each member’s unique perspective is honoured, valued, celebrated, and reflected in the space. As a learning community, the focus is not on arbitrary rules and discipline, but on co-created expectations, self regulation, teamwork, mutual respect, and accountability.

During this webinar, you will explore why building a community in your early learning environment is so important, how to go about building a community, and the different roles of the educators and children.

Connecting Children to Nature

Empowering Children: Saying Yes to Risk with Daniel Burton, World Renowned Nature Advocate

Educated by Nature are intentional about creating space and actively supporting children to experience risky play. We model positive, empowering, and confidence-building language that supports children to take risks. This is coupled with the provision of time and space for children to experience their environment and make necessary decisions to navigate risk. When we trust in children's abilities and provide opportunities for investigation and engagement with risk, they unlock their innate learning potential. This workshop explores the concept of risk in children's play and parent perceptions of risk. Ellen Sandseters' six types of risky play are outlined with discussion about the ways in which these can be used in various child-based settings to support deep engagement and authentic play opportunities. The hands-on section of the workshop allows for discussion on benefit-risk assessment preparation and challenges in implementation of risky play.

Promoting Health, Safety and Wellbeing within Early Learning Environments

“What it Takes to Protect” Abuse Prevention and Awareness: Beyond the Duty to Report with Alison Grbic

Please refer to the College of Early Childhood Educators website for more information regarding Duty to Report Training requirements.

As Educators, we already practice and are aware of children’s safety and supervision in our day-to-day routines in child care settings or early learning environments. These are all very important; however, are we doing all we can to do ‘what it takes to protect’? In this Workshop, Educators will gain more information about how to identify potential abusive situations, what the signs are, prevent abusive situations, and help those needing further support or assistance. They will gain more understanding that abuse comes in all forms, in all situations, and in all different socio-economic backgrounds. They will also learn how to gather more information and crush any biases, attachments to outcomes, old belief systems, or assumptions that create tunnel vision or distractions when we are interacting with children in our care. They will also learn about listening intuitively to children, believing a child, get more information, pick up on verbal and non-verbal cues, using discernment, setting healthy boundaries, and how to teach children to do the same. Fortunately, we as Educators are in a position to help and educate children and families and be a part of a circle of support and guidance for them. This builds trust, empowerment, assertiveness and confidence in the hopes of preventing any or further abuse from occurring or the downward spiral of mental or emotional abuse that comes from not being seen, heard, or understood.

Managing Mental Health in the Workplace for Leaders with Achieve Centre for Leadership

Dealing with issues related to mental health in the workplace can be challenging and difficult to navigate. It is essential that organizations have the capabilities to manage mental health because early identification and support typically leads to continued productivity and retention of employees. This workshop provides a roadmap to help managers participate in conversations with employees who may require support when experiencing difficulties related to mental health. Participants will learn strategies for creating a more inclusive work environment that reduces stigma surrounding mental health.

Mastering Emotional Intelligence for RECEs with Carolyn Hadcock

We have had knowledge of the concepts of Emotional Intelligence for some time, but many haven't readily addressed them. In this seminar you will define Emotional Intelligence (EI) and learn the essential components. After completing a brief quiz, you can gain a sense of your personal Emotional Intelligence (EI) which will assist you in ascertaining the importance of possessing a healthy one. Finally, a discussion will ensure where strategies on how to achieve an elevated Emotional Intelligence and become a master of your EI will transpire. Join Carolyn for a journey that promises to be life changing, knowing that it will benefit our professional and personal life.

Recruitment, Retention and Performance Management: A Three-Part Series with Achieve Centre

Session One - Hiring Strategies – Recruitment, Selection and Onboarding

Finding and selecting the right people to join our teams – those who will perform well in the role and contribute meaningfully to our workplace culture – is a challenge for every organization. This workshop explores current research and best practices to help participants evaluate and improve their current recruitment, hiring, and onboarding processes. As the first phase of the employee experience, these three elements set the stage for future performance and engagement. Through individual exercises and group discussion, participants will generate practical insights that can be immediately applied to improve their hiring strategy and practices in their organization's context.

Recruitment, Retention and Performance Management: A Three-Part Series continued

Session Two: Coaching Strategies for Learning - Conflict, Performance, Change

In the absence of intentional coaching, employees often lack the support they need to develop and perform at their highest levels. Effective leaders are skilled at coaching the people they lead to inspire growth, change, and healthy work relationships. This workshop provides a leadership approach for coaching others effectively and provides tools that bring out the best in the people. Through the use of case studies, participants will learn a five-step coaching model for working with their employees to enable changes in behaviour, promote skill development, and resolve conflict.

Session Three: Employee Engagement - How to Foster Motivation

When employees are not actively engaged at work, not only do they suffer – the organization does as well. Workplaces with high levels of engagement have employees that are committed and feel a connection to the organization. Engaged employees are willing to use discretionary time, brainpower, and effort beyond what is expected of them. This workshop explores how employee engagement occurs more readily when employees are respected and cared for, when they do tasks that bring them satisfaction, and when they work in an organization that makes a difference. Participants will learn unique insights for increasing engagement and be challenged to think critically about their approach to employee engagement.

Strengthening Your Program Through Trauma-Informed Practices with Achieve Centre

Trauma is prevalent in our world and has an impact on many of the people we interact with, including our clients and colleagues. Compassionate and trauma-informed care is essential to providing effective support and building sustainable services. This workshop explores how to build a trauma-informed culture in a workplace setting that integrates knowledge throughout the organization. Participants will develop an understanding of the pervasive impact of trauma on individual health and relationships. Guiding principles will be explored for increasing emotional and physical safety, culturally sensitive empowerment, and creating greater resilience for all parts of an organization. Becoming trauma-informed creates a sustainable foundation in any work setting to promote strength, engagement, and recovery.

Reflect and Revitalize: Onboarding Educators and Families While Bringing Your Program Statement and Centre Values to Life Series continued

Session 1 – Onboarding Educators

In this session, participants will dive into the heart of their program by exploring its vision, mission, and core values. Educators will gain clarity on their roles and responsibilities, ensuring alignment with your program's foundational principles. Participants will be equipped with practical strategies to effectively integrate the program's philosophy into their teaching practice and foster a cohesive learning environment. Through detailed explanations, real-life examples, and reflective conversations, educators will leave empowered to uphold the program's goals while nurturing a supportive educational journey. This session is designed not only to onboard educators effectively but also to enhance retention by fostering a strong connection to your program's mission and values.

Session 2 – Onboarding Families

In this session, we will dive into the onboarding process for families as it is a critical first step to ensure families feel welcomed and informed as they enrol their child in your program. The process is crucial to build a strong foundation and relationship with the family as highlighted within How Does Learning Happen? Ontario's Pedagogy for the Early Years. Within the session we will highlight how providing a thorough onboarding experience will provide an opportunity to gain a deeper understanding of the family's goals for their child and consider how your program's mission, vision, and values align with their expectations of your program.

Session 3 – Moving Forward with Your Program Statement

In this session, participants will identify key elements in program statements that inform decision-making, such as values, goals, and pedagogical approaches. You'll discover techniques to engage staff and families in ongoing conversations about the program statement and its implementation, fostering a sense of community and shared vision. Additionally, you'll learn how to align your program statement with goal setting and staff performance evaluations to ensure consistency and clarity. We'll also explore opportunities for supervisors to support and share program statements with their teams, encouraging input and development.

Inspiring Leadership in Early Learning and Child Care

Effective Leadership in Early Learning and Child Care Series with Acclaimed Author and Facilitator Paula MacLean

Paula J. MacLean, a leading Canadian author, nonprofit educator, coach and consultant, has almost four decades guiding nonprofit boards and organizations to face their unique challenges and build successful teams. She is the author of 6 books focused on leadership and human resource practices. She has worked with and for more than 400 agencies in Canada over the past several decades. This course is intended for individuals in a leadership position or those aspiring to formal leadership.

Session 1: Introduction to Effective Leadership in Early Childhood Settings

In our first session we will discuss tools and strategies that will help make you a skilled and confident leader. This will include: understanding the importance and differences between your “management” duties and your role as an early childhood leader; three different leadership styles and the situations in which each will work best, and your important role in influencing employee retention.

Session 2: Performance Management Part 1 – Two types of Coaching

In our second session you will learn how to support employees to be their best selves at work. We will explore and practice Instructional/Directive Coaching and Facilitative/Challenging Coaching and when to use each. We will also complete an in-class practice session approach using case studies and small group work.

Session 3: Giving Feedback and Having Difficult Conversations

In our third session we will discuss why we sometimes avoid giving feedback and how we can overcome our fears. You will learn how to give effective feedback (using T3 – Tact, Tone, and Timing). Together we will practice how to get started and exactly what to say when giving feedback. Then we will shift gears to an 8 Step Approach to having difficult or challenging conversations with peers, your manager, parents, or colleagues in other organizations. You'll watch a funny but educational video with communication expert Shari Harley, author of How to Talk to Anyone about Anything.

Session 4: Performance Management Part 2 - Great Onboarding Practices, Getting off the Roller Coaster, and Employee Retention Strategies

In our last session you will learn how great onboarding prevents future performance issues and improves retention. You'll also learn how to get off the feedback rollercoaster with employees who yo-yo between doing better and doing worse. We'll look at three strategies that will help build strong supervisor-employee relationships that support long-term retention and prevent turnover.

Intuitive Leadership Team Building Boot Camp Series with Alison Grbic

Leaders will learn practical steps to support their own mental and emotional health through focusing on 3 areas: Self Care, Emotional Balance, and Intuitive Knowledge. They will learn to:

- Go within, listen to themselves and their own needs by getting quiet, doing things they enjoy to do the inner reflective work, discover areas of healing, acceptance, and releasing past wounds, fears/doubts to live as their true authentic self.
- To see the value of self-care and its benefits as they fill their cup and to function at their optimum to best support others without self-sabotage.
- To gain insight, wisdom, and intuitive knowledge to guide them each day and “to tune in/tap in”.
- Use the “Intuitive Model” as a guide to recognize, honour, and access their intuition and take action based on their intuitive promptings, providing clarity to make difficult decisions or face conflict or stressful situations as self-reliant, confident, and empowered leaders.
- To balance empathy, accept others, set healthy boundaries, and use intuitive discernment with people/situations to support others in traumatic/adverse situations by being objective, grounded, and through intuitive interactions, creating deeper connections and understanding of self/others.
- To understand intuition works in tandem with emotional balance and through use of “Steps to Emotional Balance” to improve self-awareness, acceptance of self/others, and reflect on areas that require healing of triggers/wounds, old beliefs, biases, and assumptions or attachments. Building their own emotional/mental health, raise their vibration, and create more happiness, opportunities, and positivity in their own lives, having a ripple effect on teams and communities as they are better “equipped” to support others and share this knowledge in reciprocal ways.
- Emotionally healthy, intuitive leaders in our sector have a profound, positive impact on uplifting the emotional/mental well-being of children, families, staff, overall building sustainable systems, and communities to overcome adversity.

Part 1: Intuitive Knowledge Skill Development and Tuning and Tapping In

Tuning in and finding inner power to lead/interact intuitively building confidence, self-trust, and healthy ways to oversee/work in sync with organizations and teams. This enables professionals to make better decisions and see situations from a higher, more objective perspective, seeing the whole picture in any given situation to come out of stagnant situations and lead agencies/staff through change and adversity.

Part 2: Emotional Balance, Self Care, and Seeking Joy

Facing fears and healing past triggers/wounds to increase inner emotional stability and create emotionally intelligent/balanced teams and work environments. Through also practicing self-care and seeing it as a necessity, not a luxury, and learning to put ourselves first to operate at our optimum to better be able to support, serve, and uplift others. Participants will gain effective emotionally intelligent skills to best fulfill their own emotional balance as well as remain calm, balanced, and grounded in stressful, toxic, challenging, or adverse situations in communities and workplaces.

Comment aider nos enfants à développer l'autorégulation et mieux gérer ses comportements

L'autorégulation aide l'enfant à s'ajuster et à gérer son attention, ses émotions, son comportement, ses pulsions, ses réactions face aux différentes situations ou changements dans son environnement. Les recherches récentes démontrent l'importance de développer cette habileté dès le jeune âge car c'est étroitement lié à la réussite scolaire et sociale pour la vie durant. Cet atelier offrira des stratégies pratiques pour favoriser ce développement.

La diversité intégrée en tout et partout

Nous préparons les enfants à vivre et à réussir dans un monde diversifié et en constante évolution. Nous avons un rôle à jouer pour rendre les enfants plus ouverts aux gens différents de lui. Par le biais d'activités interactives les participants vont réfléchir sur leur responsabilité collective et individuelle en tant qu'éducateurs et éducatrices de la petite enfance pour créer un milieu où la diversité et l'inclusion sont acceptées, normalisées et valorisées. Relationships through Research: Cultivating Connection and Engagement with Children and Families through Teacher Research: A Three-Part Series for EarlyON Teams with Victoria Armstrong

EarlyON programs are bubbling with endless possibilities for curiosity, creativity, innovation and connection. Through intentional research questions, we can deepen our understanding of who children are, the competencies they hold, and the ideas they have as we listen and observe carefully, think with one another, and respond thoughtfully.

Part 1: Forming the Question - Brainstorming Together

Research begins with a question. In Part 1, we'll begin by diving into what teacher research is, how and what we observe, what makes a researchable question, and how we can go about forming a specific question for research with other colleagues and families. At the end of this session, participants will have a process that they can utilize with families to create a researchable question for their programs.

Part 2: Studying the Question - Looking Together

Once we have a question ready to study, we are ready to listen and look closely. In Part 2, we'll look at multiple ways to document children's thinking and ideas in response to our research question. This includes creating a research board, a parent/caregiver documentation invitation, and sharing secondary research on our topic with families. We'll then think about how to look for big ideas and overarching themes in the documentation that we are capturing as a way of pulling our research together. At the end of this session, participants will have tangible ideas for documenting answers to their research question with families.

Once we've spent time listening, observing, gathering artefacts of children's thinking and ideas, studying and thinking together, we have the opportunity to celebrate all that we've learned and share this learning with others outside of our programs. In Part 3, we'll look at how we can create captivating and meaningful displays and other artefacts of our research findings that include photos, children's work, our written observations and interpretations, and more.

Professional Learning Series for Home Based Professionals: Strengthening Play in the Home through How Does Learning Happen?

Session One: How Does Learning Happen for Non RECEs with ECCDC Training Team

I'm not an RECE so what does How Does Learning Happen? Ontario's Pedagogy for the Early Years look like for me? How Does Learning Happen? Is a pedagogical resource developed for early learning professionals that promotes a shared understanding of what children need and what can be done to help them grow and flourish. The early learning field is moving away from prescribed checklists of tasks to complete or a template for a "one-size-fits-all" approach which recognizes the uniqueness of programs, children, families, and educators. How Does Learning Happen? is meant to promote deeper reflection on how to create places and experiences where children, families, and educators explore, question, and learn together in quality early years programs. This session has been designed to introduce non RECEs to the ideas and theories within How Does Learning Happen? and offers opportunities for reflection, discussion, and exploration of the document.

Professional Learning Series for Home Based Professionals: Strengthening Play in the Home through How Does Learning Happen? continued

Session Two: Unlocking the Magic of Emergent Curriculum - An Introduction to the Emergent Curriculum Approach with Tina Geers

Step into the magical world of emergent planning – where children are the key! The way we plan play experiences for children is changing as we focus on the interests and abilities of the children as the core concept behind planning classroom experiences and co-learn, co-create, and co-imagine with the children. What is emergent planning? Is it effective? Will the children still enjoy the experiences and learn? How does it work with the Ontario Framework? Discover the answers to these questions and more as we look at key tips and strategies for implementing an emergent curriculum approach to children’s learning. This workshop is designed to reveal the mystery and magic of the well-known emergent curriculum concept and put it into practice in your early learning environment. Remember! Not all environments and planning are the same – just like not all children or educators are the same. So, let’s figure out how to do it so it works for everyone!

Session Three: Playful Planning: Enriching Your Emergent Curriculum Approach with Tina Geers

Playful learning experiences promote a sense of curiosity, exploration, and confidence, which are what we all strive to achieve when we plan for our early childhood environment and our children’s experiences. The emergent curriculum approach is one of the most popular and best approaches to achieve this. This approach lets the child lead the playful experiences and follow their own learning path. As early childhood educators, our job is to observe their interests and plan to complement or extend them. Being intentional about preparing a responsive environment is a key element to emergent planning. How we plan activities, play experiences, provocations and invitations and make changes to our environment all depends on the dynamics of our group of children and our ability to really listen, observe, and learn about the children’s deeper interests and abilities. Let us walk alongside the children and join them in their journeys of wonder, play and curiosity. Join me as we discuss planning strategies that work for everyone. There is no ‘one size fits all’ when it comes to planning for children’s play, so let’s explore what your journey is with the children and how you can plan for play!

Tina Geers (Owner of Inspired Minds ECC Consulting Inc.) is an Early Childhood Coach and Consultant with over 17 years of experience. She has taught in Asia, Europe, Canada and has experience as an educator, coach, consultant, and mentor. Bachelor’s of Professional Arts, Early Childhood Education and Training from Athabasca University Early Learning and Child Care degree from Grande Prairie Regional College.

Peer to Peer Book Study Opportunities

Slow Knowledge and the Unhurried Child by Alison Clark, A New 3-Part Book Study

This book study will explore the value of slow pedagogies and slow knowledge. Slow pedagogy focuses on the importance of making time for children's learning and development in a fast-paced society.

Session 1 of this book study will look at the reasons to be slow, how the pressures speed up and for children to be ready for the next stage of development, and the relationships children and educators have with time.

Session 2 will explore forms of slow practices in the outdoors, in the indoor environment, in daily routines, and in our observation and documentation.

The last session will look at how we move forward with this concept and what a 'timefull' approach can look like.

Book Study - Illuminating Care – The Pedagogy and Practice of Care in Early Childhood Communities

Please join the ECCDC Coaching and Mentoring team to explore a five-part book study on Illuminating Care – The Pedagogy and Practice of Care in Early Childhood Communities, by Carol Garboden Murray. We will dive deeply into the concept of defining care as an action, an attitude, and an ethic for the early learning and child care community. The book study is for all those who work within the early learning and child care field as we will be exploring how we look to elevate care for the children in our programs and acknowledge the essential role that early childhood educators have in building a strong profession. We will be looking to dispel the myth and discover the truth of care for young children, consider how we move beyond a basic standard of care, name care as a core value in the work that we do, and explore care ethics and a responsive care philosophy.

Creating Circles of Support Through Cultivating Professional Friendships in Early Childhood Education: A Professional Conversation

Book written by Diane Kashin and Launched in Niagara with the Loving Care of Cindy Green and Support from Diane's Family

Adult professional friendships are integral to early childhood education, giving educators daily support and collaboration, nurturing their professional and pedagogical growth, and - not to be discounted - making the job fun. During this workshop, participants will explore what it means to be a friend, how to make friends and keep friends, and what happens when friendships end. All are invited to attend. Workshop participants will be invited to join a series of professional conversations following this launching session. Dates and times to be explored as a group.

Together with Dory Kashin, Cindy is excited to join you in Niagara and share reflections about the big ideas inherent in this book as well as Diane's writing process.

In addition to being a daughter, wife, mother, bubbie, sister, friend, professor and mentor, Diane Kashin, EdD, RECE was an early learning educator who shared her research, wisdom and passion with so many. She was an author of many books pertaining to early learning and care and her blog tecbiresearch.blog was followed by thousands. In her final book, Cultivating Professional Friendships in Early Childhood Education (2024), Diane invites educators to delve into the theory that professional friendship is a practice that enhances professional learning and growth. In her work with educators, it was her aim to embed opportunities for play. Playful adults are more inclined to invite young children to follow their curiosities through play and inquiry. Diane's enthusiasm and knowledge about social constructivism and pedagogical practices invited, sustained and deepened the thinking of so many. Diane, we are your legacy.

Dory Kashin, daughter of Diane Kashin, is an Event Planner by trade and is currently a Creative Operations Manager at Hootsuite. Dory has worked alongside Cindy and her mom; sourcing and lugging materials, securing venues, planning and setting up food and beverage and has been a sounding board for many of our professional dreams.

Cindy Green B.Sc., RECE is a retired ECE professor from a community college in Ontario and currently works as an early learning and care consultant. Cindy and the late Diane Kashin, professional friends for a number of decades deepened our relationship throughout the years as we were passionate to engage in pedagogical ponderings that kept us up all hours of the night! Cindy is honoured to have been one of Diane's personal and professional friends.

A Culture of Agency: Fostering Engagement, Empowerment, Identity, and Belonging in the Early Years with Lisa Burman

Deeply engage all young learners with a sense of agency and belonging. What gives some early childhood classrooms that special “buzz” of learning? How do those educators create the culture of learning for their students, where all children are deeply involved and drive their own learning with curiosity and care? Using her everyday research approach, in the tradition of the pedagogistas of Reggio Emilia, author Lisa Burman observed several special classrooms with children ages three to eight and identified some common engagement, agency, identity, and belonging, which together combine to create a culture of agency. The term agency is widely used, but often misunderstood as “giving children choice.” Agency is far more than this, and the most powerful learning happens when personal agency is connected to community we are only as strong as each other. These connections form the heart of a democratic one that values the rights of the child and empowers participation, shared power, respect for diversity, and self-efficacy. Her framework for supporting a culture of agency has five Relationships, Rituals for belonging and identity, Language of agency, Environment, and Learning Contexts. Using this framework along with the book’s guiding questions and goal-setting tool will help you bring intentionality as you build your classroom culture to support children’s agency and learning.

Book Launch and Highlights with the Author: Re-imagining Heartbreak: An Educator's Journey to Reclaim Whole-Heartedness with Shelley Brandon, book edited by Ann Pelo and Margie Carter

Reimagining Heartbreak is part of the Reimagining Our Work (ROW) book collection, a book series that inspires early childhood educators to reimage their work and thinking alongside children. Stop. Look. Listen. Feel. Come fully alive in your encounters with young children. Reimagining Heartbreak is a call to return to fullhearted, embodied teaching. It is a journey through the woods and into the depths. Shelley Brandon's stories reveal the extraordinary beauty that is possible in ordinary life. Can you dare to bring your whole self to your work with young children? Can you afford not to?

Join Author Shelley Brandon to explore some main highlights of her book, to learn about her inspiration in writing it and to consider key messages in our work with young Children. Books may be ordered in advance and Shelley will be happy to sign books during the day.

Pedagogical Documentation in Early Years Practice: Seeing Through Multiple Perspectives with Acclaimed Educator, Author and Researcher Susan Stacey with A Special Book Signing

Morning: Emergent Curriculum – Debunking the Myths and Creating a Shared Understanding

This workshop will explore the common myths and misapplications around Emergent Curriculum: what it is, and is not, how it translates into daily practice, and the educator's role in the process, including the Cycle of Inquiry.

We will think through and practice the journey of Emergent Curriculum, from observations and reflective dialogue to thoughtful responses to children's ideas, questions, and theories. Through investigation of examples from real classrooms, we will create a shared understanding of Emergent Curriculum that can be taken forward into your practice.

Afternoon: A hands-on exploration of Pedagogical Documentation

What is the difference between documentation and pedagogical documentation? What are the many ways in which Pedagogical Documentation might be used as a tool for understanding children's theories and ideas, for creating questions for ourselves that lead to our own professional growth, and for communicating with families and society at large the brilliance of young children's thinking?

We will explore these questions as we move through the process of creating a rough piece of documentation and engaging in dialogue with each other about the thinking involved.
